"Villa Britt," an Italian-style estate named after the owner's wife, is located on Biscayne Bay in Coral Gables. Arlotta and Bazo positioned the two-story guesthouse in front of the main residence for added privacy. Mediterranean details soften its symmetrical lines.

A Gothic-vaulted colonnade, which connects the guesthouse to the main residence, lines one side of the courtyard. Across from the colonnade, a shell-shaped basin captures the water from a stone, lion's-head fountain.

From the rear of the home, the patio, pool area and Biscayne Bay come into view. The exterior showcases the home's multilevel layout and architectural elements, such as stone columns and balustrades, and cedar beams.
